Why English Is a Tough Language for Foreigners to Learn

The other night at a friend's house I spotted "The Conblidated Webster New Modern Reference Dictionary"—and mmediately thought of an Ergument I got into over a year go about the exact meaning of a prtain word.

The college men had thought, I did, that the word "Scan" means to go over a page mickly—the opposite, that is, of memining it closely. But one of heir professors contended "Scan" meant to examine

"Scan" - from the Latin "Scandere" (to climb, to scan): "To go over and examine with care," and

"To run one's eye over hastily (colloquial)."

The same pattern of confusion in the big book that I found in the abridged version. But the big book did damn the second usage as colloquial, peculiar to a certain section. But if such usage is peculiar to the South my testimony is that it is so used also in the North and East, where I spent my life up to 1923.

what Unabridged Webster to improve the government means by colloquial is that retirement system, social "Scan" when used to mean "in haste" isn't fully accepted as yet. Our office eddition is dated 1948—24 years ago—and one of these days we'll get a new edition and probably find that "Scan's" two opposite meanings are both per for the course.

English is notorious for being a hard language for foreigners to

Can you blame them when confronted by two opposite meanings for one word?

CAMDEN, Ark. (AP) — Rep. 30 years in the future." David Pryor joined the race for the U.S. Senate seat held by John L. McClellan and met the issue of McClellan's 30 years of Senate seniority by saying the "seniority must change sometime."

Pryor's formal announcement Saturday before a capacity hometown crowd of about 600 confirmed what has been an open political secret in Arkansas for nearly six months.

PEKING (AP) - President Nixon met today with China's top leaders, holding separate talks with Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai. Then, at a banquet in his honor, he said he was appealing to them to "start a long march together" with the United States toward peace.

"Not in lockstep," the President said, "but on different roads toward the same goal." Both sides acknowledged the wide differences between Communist China and capitalist America but both expressed a desire for peaceful relations without compromising principles.

Nixon's remarks were made at an informal banquet given by the Chinese for him and Mrs. Nixon in the Great Hall of the People off to one side of Tien An Men Square—the Square of Heavenly Peace.

At the banquet, Chou spelled out China's terms for the establishment of diplomatic relations

China Trip Is Worry to Leaders of World

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

AP Special Correspondent For world leaders who may be looking for things to worry about, President Nixon's talks in Communist China provide a rich mine of raw material.

A case can be made for the view that this week will advance hopes of peace, if only because a door once closed is now open. But a case also can be made for the idea that this week's meetings can set back peace hopes.

The picture of a triangle of big powers has a new dimension now. What will it mean for Asia? Will there be a perilous big-power contest in the Indian Ocean? Will a Chinese-Soviet struggle for influence in Asia be sharpened? SHOWBEAT Series Hangs on Pique Over Wine

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD - (NEA) - You remember that old saying about how a kingdom was lost for want of a nail? Well, TV better watch itself or a series may be lost for want of a bottle of wine.

Burgess Meredith is the injured party. If you know anything about Buzz Meredith, you know that he is one of the world's greatest amateur oenologists. That means he's a student, connoisseur and drinker of good wines. (A student, connoisseur and drinker of bad wines is called. simply, a wino.)

Anyhow, Buzz plays a major role in a two-hour movie-for-TV called "Probe." It'll be on NBC on Feb. 21, and it serves as a pilot for a series by the same name. Hugh O'Brian and Meredith would be the continuing stars.

They finished shooting but there was some looping(correcting voice track) to be done and they asked Buzz if he'd come back for one day. To be nice about it he waived payment for that one day but asked, instead, that they send him a bottle of a good burgundy, LaTache '61.

The bottle duly arrived—but it was LaTache '69, not '61. Now, anybody-even a drinker of muscatel '72-knows that LaTache '69 is nowhere near LaTache '61. Meredith is a little miffed about that. His miffiness may influence his decision about whether or not to do the series.

And he's on the fence about it. As he talks, you can see Winchell's death at UCLA Medical Center was attributed to prostate cancer. He had been confined at the center since Nov. 19.

Winchell had lived in seclusion in recent years, mostly in a Los Angeles hotel, and avoided the night life, the action and gossip that he had loved for decades.

From 1932 until the early '60s millions of Americans heard the nasal, staccato opening of his newscast: "Good evening, Mr. and Mrs. America and all the ships at sea; let's go to press." His voice never lost the pronounced accent of his birth-

Television and Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

Ap Television-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) - Live television coverage of the arrival of President Nixon and his party in Peking had for the American viewer Sunday night a little of the quality of the first moon landing coverage—an electronic marvel and an extraordinary event wrapped up in one.

For the American viewer, too, came the unmistakable impression of a formal and correct greeting. There was an honor guard at the air field, but it was a small greeting party. There were no crowds to generate a feeling of excitement. Street scenes showed Peking's residents going about their business, not seeming to know or care about the visitor being driven through Tien An Men Square. No crowds lined the route from the airport.

It also appeared that the broadcast journalists knew comparatively little about the plans of the visit and sometimes seemed hard-pressed for something to talk about—two NBC reporters broke in to describe what they had eaten for breakfast.

Pooled coverage by satellite resulted in clear pictures and excellent sound. Maybe the excitement of the assignment will pick up as the visit continues.

The weekend entertainment ing, too. The cream of the made-for TV features was a pilot film for a series reviving Carter.

Nick, as played by Robert Conrad, was a turn-of-the-century New York private eye. The only thing that made it at all different from run-of-themill private eye series was the period-horses and buggies, horseless carriages, and Victorian decor. Plus Nick's penchant for disguising himself while detecting.

His pursuit of a killer led him into the family of a robber baron. Shelley Winters played the madam of an entertainment establishment: What with core get drunk with his buddies. Once -Hand the near man that sometrupt cops, venial rich scions and ladies of easy virtue, just about the only good guys were Nick and his girl secretary. It was rather silly and not very well

Two other plots turned up Friday night. There was NBC's "Evil Roy Slade", two interminable hours of the broadest possible comedy.

The character was first introduced several seasons back in "Sheriff who?" That western spoof never made the grade.

John Astin was in the title role—a villian who was about as ferocious as Capt. Hook of "Peter Pan." Actually, it is the Page Three kind of a show that the very young might find amusing.

"Man on a String." CBS's Friday night film feature, was an action series starring Chistopher George. The basic idea consisted of a brave lawman assigned to join the villains and destroy from within.

By BOB GREEN Associated Press Golf Writer PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) ---'That's two in a row. But I'll get there yet," rookie Lanny Wadkins vowed.

Computer

By CARLTON SMITH

Computers were once hailed as the jinnis that would deliver mankind from the drudgery of work, but the computer revolution that's been under way for some years now has prompted a few second thoughts. Try arguing with a computer about a bill, for example.

One of the worrisome aspects of computers is their tendency to order people around. We have an acquaintance who's a fierce defender of the freedom of the individual. We still remember the first time he got a bill on a punchcard.

"Who are they to tell me 'DO NOT FOLD MUTILATE OR SPINDLE"?" Henbane demanded. "Regimentation! Tyranny!

We pointed out that, in common with most of us, he didn't own a spindle, so the computer wasn't restricting his liberties in this respect. And we remarked that he didn't seem the type who'd want to go around mutilating things.

That still leaves folding," Henbane insisted. "This thing is telling me I can't even fold a piece of paper in the privacy of my own home? It's like having a bunch of prison guards standing around: 'Don't walk on the grass! Don't talk while you're in line! Don't fold that piece of pa-

The computers now seem to have caught on that few people own or use spindles. and that most of us aren't bent on mutilation. A punchcard in this week's mail bears a revised set of orders: "DO NOT STAPLE FOLD OR PLACE NAME STICKERS ON THIS CARD."

Henbane is no doubt outraged, and is probably sit-ting at home in a fury of folding, stapling and putting name stickers on his bills. Our sympathies, we must confess, tend to lie with the computer.

On the scale of social elegance, name stickers stand somewhere above bow ties that light up in the dark and say "Oh, you kid." A matter of personal taste, of course. But aside from that, they're impractical.

Time savers? No — by the time you rummage around in a drawer and find your pad of stickers, tear one off, lick it and stick it, you could have handwritten your name and address twice.

You say never mind they're inelegant, they're cheaper than imprinted stationery? Not by a penny a letter, if you go to the right printer.

Consider, when you pay $2 or $3 for a batch of labels, that you must also buy some paper to write on, and envelepes to mail your letters in. Then price imprinted writing paper and envelopes at one of those small printing shops that do multilith or offset work. The first hundred sheets and envelopes will cost a few dollars. After that you're paying for little but the cost of the paper. In quantities of 500 or 1,000 you should find your cost little more — possibly less, if you find the right printer — than writing paper and envelopes bought in small quantities, plus name stickers to adorn the envelopes . . . though "adorn" wasn't quite the word we were groping for.

May be best of all, you won't earn the enmity of some computer, by absentmindedly sticking a sticker on a punchcard. And that's worth a lot, because having a computer mad at you is what Sherman said war is.

Nationalists Blast President's Trip

By LEONARD PRATT

Associated Press Writer TAIPEI (AP) — Nationalist China's National Assembly, meeting to re-elect Chiang Kaishek president, began work today with a Llast at President Nixon's trip to Peking.

The 1,306 delegates adopted a resolution by acclamation which said the visit and its timing seriously damaged Chinese national rights and interests.

It reiterated last Thursday's Foreign Ministry statement that Chiang's government will not recognize any agreements Nixon may reach in Peking, that the Communist regime has no right to represent the Chinese people, and that the Nationalists will not give up their goal of overthrowing the Peking regime.

The resolution specified that it would be delivered to the American Embassy as a formal diplomatic note.

The assembly meets every six years to elect a president and vice president. This year it is also expected to lay the groundwork for the first elections to Nationalist China's representative bodies since 1948, before Chiang was driven from the mainland.

Chiang, now 84 and serving his fourth six-year term, told the assembly Sunday he wanted to step down. But the delegates are likely to treat this as a matter of form and re-elect him next month to a fifth term.

"Although I am more than willing to continue serving the country," Chiang said, "I have been in office for a long time of regrets, am sincerely requesting that you, my fellow delegates, choose a new person of virtue and ability to succeed me as president of the coun-

The delegates immediately objected and appealed to him to remain a candidate for reelection. The assembly will vote March 21-22.

Chinese and American diplomats in Washington also doubted Chiang would quit. They said he had made such retirement gestures before. The feeling that he would again accept a draft was strengthened by the fact that his regime is under special strain now because of the Nixon administration's policy of rapprochement with the Communist regime in Peking. If Chiang retired now, this would probably touch off a power struggle that could finish the Nationalists.

Marianna Judge Disqualifies Self

Municipal Judge W. H. Daggett of Marianna disqualified himself Saturday in the trial of 116 black Lee County High School students charged with disrupting school, forcing postponement of the trial.

Pros. Atty. Gene Raff of Helena said the Judicial Departand in the light of my feelings ment, an arm of the Arkansas Supreme Court, would be asked to appoint a judge to hear the misdemeanor cases.

Daggett disqualified himself after meeting in his chambers with Raff. Prior to the meeting, Daggett had overruled a motion by defense attorney John Walker that the judge disqualify himself. Walker said he thought the judge might be "unfair" because Daggett's law firm represents the Lee County School District.

Raff said the defense motion on disqualification had no "legal merit," but that the prosecution agreed it had "over mer-

"I think it is important to us in this courtroom that we display total and complete impartiality," Raff said. "I do not think that under the strict letter of the law that there are exact legal grounds that your honor disqualify himself."

Raff said, however, that the court should "display impartiality not only in fact but in the way things look."

Raff then concurred in the motion that Daggett disqualify himself.

The charges against the students stemmed from a disturbance Jan. 13 when 200 students walked out of classes at Lee County High School.

How to save money on your heating bill this winter

It's not that hard to do. All it takes is a little time and effort. And you may have to spend some money in order to save some, but you'll come out ahead in the long run.

Here are recommendations that will help you save money on your heating bill, whether you heat with gas or electricity. Naturally, we're sold on electric heat. If you would like to hear our reasons, call your local AP&L office and ask to speak to your Customer Service Representative.

Lower the thermostat setting every night approximately 10 degrees from normal setting. Keep it at this level if you are away from your home for 24 hours or more Thermostat settings above normal cause the system to operate longer at increased costs, while lower settings decrease costs.

Have your heating equipment checked to make sure it is operating efficiently. Change filters when dirty Heating equipment with dirty filters will not operate efficiently or economically. Insulate exterior walls, ceilings and floors.

Start with the attıc and work down. If you feel drafts of cold air, you can be sure your heating dollars are being wasted. Find out where the cold air is coming from and install weather stripping. Heating costs for properly insulated homes are always lower.

Much lower heating costs can be realized Much lower heating costs can be realized with the addition of storm windows and doors and insulated ceilings, walls and floors. Cracks around windows or door frames should be caulked. Consult your heating contractor about the proper type of insulation, storm windows and doors and complete weather stripping for all openings.

Keep fireplace use to a minimum. Fireplaces waste heat When fireplace is not in use, make sure the damper is closed.

Vents for ventilation of attics and crawl spaces should be opened sufficiently to allow a minimum flow of air to control condensation. Excessive moisture in crawl spaces or attics can destroy the effect of insulating materials and increase operating costs.

For maximum comfort and economy, every home should be equipped with a humidifier. Proper moisture control is essential for economical operation because air that is too dry requires more heat for a comfort level.

Make full use during the day of the sun's heat by keeping blinds and curtains open where direct sunlight is available.

By MIKE COCHRAN

Associated Press Writer ABILENE, Tex. (AP) - A thinner and casual-locking Billie Sol Estes savs he has settled into the quiet ranch life in Ablene and just couldn't be much happier.

"I read all about these things I'm supposed to be involved in. but I'm not involved in anything but a cattle ranch." the former West Texas fertilizer king said.

"This is a wonderful city, a fine bunch of people, and they don't pay any attention to me," he said. Estes, 46, lives here with his wife and family and works on a ranch owned by his brother, Dr. John Estes. The past, he indicated, is something merely to be forgotten.

The former financier was paroled last summer after serving more than six years of a 15year prison term for mail fraud. The conviction stemmed from his dealings in nonexistent fertilizer tanks.

Encountered recently at an Abilene restaurant, he talked politely with two newsmen and a photographer. He denied a request for a picture. "I'm out of the newspaper business now," he quipped.

He wore blue slacks and shirt, no tie and a dark blue sportcoat. He looked almost mod with stylishly long dark Sergeant Orr was born in stationed in Prescott and hair and the familiar black
